RICHMOND, CALIFORNIA, THURSDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 19, 1929.

MARTINEZ, Sept. 17 grand jury which adjourned this week, and of which Edson Hale wa foreman, was one of the most active in the county for a number of years.

Besides making many important recommendations, investigations were made which showed sur-rising results.

The most important investigation relates to the insurance of county property and the premiums that were collected on it. As a result of the probe Supervisors Charles H. Hayden of Martinez returned to the insurance companys "all premiums illegally received by him or his son for the sule of insurance to Contra Costa county."

Homesick Stenographers When every political observer in France started guessing on the dura-tion of The Hague Conference, most of them built their calculations upon the intricate problems to be un-raveled, but M. Pierre Audiat, a Parisian popular writer, took a dif-ferent view of the matter. The Hague is a fine little city, he said, but it is a little sombre. On a rainy day it's even worse. After the delegates and experts have seen the tulip fields and taken a ride or two out to Scheveningen, the seaside resort nearby, they won't have any more change of scenery. Night life in The Hague simply does not exist. It's worse than Bruges, says M. Audiat. There hasn't been a scandal in Holland for three centuries, he adds. And he intimates that none is likely to occur when so many strangers are present. The Dutch are extremely well behaved when strangers are around. From the very beginning The Hague Conference was marked by boredom. The Paristennes who ompanied the French delegation in the capacity of stenographers, sixty of them, were writing home within a week that they were homesick. And when the stenographers start to complain, the statesmen are not far behind. Now if the powers had picked Deauville or Biarritz—in that case the conference might have gone on indefinitely. M. Poincare's

Now that M. Poincare is temporarily, at least, out of the political game in France, his life and work are for the first time examined at lesure by various writers. Casting a glance over the ensemble of this recent analytical literature on the subject of M. Poincare, one is struck by the little love or affection in which he is held. He is admired and praised and even his most critics are forced to admit his integrity and patriotism, but none speaks a word of affection or esteem on the man who has given unsparingly of his time and energy for France. He could have retired ten years ago, after his term as President of the Republic came to an end, but he ook on new burdens when the inflation period began, knowing full well that his task would be an ungrateful one and totally devoid of glory. Whatever can be man, and some have said very harsh things of him-one pamphlet or the Poincare family fortune was recently suppressed by the police-he hever appeared as a self-seeker. He goes about his work without ostentation or show. Take the recent illness. complaint was a painful one. His face showed nothing of it. Only when the ratification battle is won does he retire, and then without noise or publicity. Before he de-livers himself up to the surgeons he puts his correspondence in order. He clears his table, piled high with letters and official dossiers. And then without any interviews, without allowing any one to know until an hour or so before the operation is due, he relinquishes power. He will likely come back in the same quiet and unostentatious manner.

It's your thoughts that change, not your friendships.

As you grow older you may change the character of the people with whom you associate. You may find yourself going up in the intellectual scale. (I hope you do!) A woman once asked her minis-fundamental psychological differences between the two peoples are at the bottom of it. And some of it came to the fore when Mr. Snowden, in his tenacious Yorkshire way, spoke rather blunty at The Hague Conference. Since the close of the war British negotiators preferred to appease the French by remaining faithful to the war-ideology. With Mr. Snowden's outburst the rancor of middle-class England is displayed to the world. Curjous it was too, to see the entire British press, almost unanimously rallying to Mr. Snowden's support. He volced what had latently been felt, that was all. Still, the Entent Gordiale goes on, as Mr. Henderson remarked. The phrase is reminiscent of war days. Whenever there was serious trouble at the high command and statesmen were ready to fly at each other's throats, some such communique was generally given out. The soldiers understood by it that the Entente was nearer being a mes-Entente. EN frequently are heard gal-lantly attributing their success in life to the staunch support of the "little women." A few modern women—perhaps one should say a few women with modern husbands—have been known to declare that much of the credit for their achievements has been due to the aid and loyalty of their matrimonial partners. But dark-baired Marie Anne Schuster. Better known to New York as Mme. Heloise, asserts emphatically that her "sensible parents" are responsible for the success she is rapidly attaining as one of New York's smartest couturiers.

"I was very fortunate," said Marie Anne, pausing long enough in the midst of a busy day in her exclusive Madison Avenue establishment to explain the situation, "in having parents who always let me do just what I wanted. And that, you know, is very unusual for German parents. They generally want to arrange the lives of their children for them and tell them just what to do. But mine were always willing for me to go my own way."

It all seems quite simple to the quiet, perfectly poised young woman who left her maite Munich at the see of elybric. in life to the staunch support

It all seems quite simple to the quiet, porfectly poised young woman who left her native Munich at the age of eighteen to follow out her own ideas of what she wanted from life. Even as a child, she had had pretty definite ideas on the subject, and since she had been allowed to pursue them without parental interference, and they had worked out successfully, that, to her, was obvious indication of the good sense of those parents.

Although clothes have always been one of her chief interests, it was not until three years ago that Miss Echuster decided to make a profession of them. Before that time, she had tried her hand at a number of different things. She chose whatever would enable her to move about from one country to another acquiring the commodition before the time of supplied that had been and the her hand the many countries of Europe. Eventually, sine made Paris her headquartors, and there her natural interest in clothes led her to haunt the famous dressmaking houses. She studied fashions and learned to know something of how smart wearing apparel was designed, made and sold.

Coming to the United States after the war had begun, she decided she liked this country so much that she would make it her permanent residence.

"I was in London when the war started," she explained "teachies in clothes the country so much that she would make it her permanent residence.

liked this country so much that she would make it her permanent residence.

"I was in London when the war started," she explained, "teaching in a doctor's family. They wanted me to stay with them and keep on as always, but things were not so comfortable in that country. Germans were not interned at that time, but we were forbidden by the authorities to go more than three miles from our residence. That was not very pleasant, so I decided to come to America."

Here Miss Schuster continued her program of teaching and traveling for several years, and in the course of time became a United States citizen. Then, three years ago, friends offered to back her in her present enterprise. "I did not know what name to call my business," she recalled, laughing, "so I opened a French book and ran my finger down the page. There I saw the name of Helolae, so that is how I happened to choose my business title."

Those independent ideas which have carried Miss Schuster triumphantly along from childhood-soon proved valuable assets in the new enterprise. Her originality of design was not long in attracting the attention of stage and society stars, who passed the word along from one to the other. Now, in addition to her regular drassmaking, she finds hercelf sought by the moving picture world to create costumes to be worn by hea actresses. It was she who designed and made all the dothes worn by Jeanne Eagels in her last to the started of the sought by the moving pictures.

Stop taking pills, saits and other harsh physics that irritate and weaken the bowels. Such things merely force a movement without cleansing the liver of its excess bile, which explains why your constipation always reforms in a day or two and you find it necessary to use more physic.

Everybody ought to know that a torpid, lazy liver clogged with bile is the true cause of habitual constipation. This stored-up bile poisons the whole system and upsets digestion, resulting in bad breath, badaches, coated tongue, sailow skin, sour stomach, gas, dizzy spells or high blood pressure.

After a good internal cleansing with Plentiax, which also tones up and regulates the liver, these symptoms usually disappear completely.

Contra Costa Queen County of the West

A Prize Winning County

Whether in agriculture or industry its maximum activity is seen in Contra Costa county. It is the combination of industry and agriculture with unusually attractive living conditions, that has made so great an opportunity not only for financial advancement but also for comfort and contentment in this country.

Contra Costa county leads all counties in the United States in per capita wealth. There is an average of $5,418 for every person in the county as opposed to the next highest county with a per capita wealth of $3,300.

The industrial payroll of the County alone exceeds $25,000,000 annually. And yet with this volume of manufacturing activities, the county has no factory cities or towns in the common, acceptance of

This county has 70 miles of deep waterfront and nine port cities on its shore line. RICHMOND -Crockett, Port Costa, Martinez, Pittsburg, Antioch, Avon, Selby, and Bay Point. Our own RICH-MOND wharves handle more than 6,400,000 tons of freight-making the city the fourth largest in point of tonnage on the Pacific Coast.

We have no slums, no congested apartment house district. These features combined with good schools, churches, play-grounds and every recreational facility contribute to health and progress.

In this county there are more than 130 factories, including seven that rank at the top in size throughout the entire world. We stand third among the counties of California in manufacturing, producing more than $700,000,000 worth of manufactured products.

Contra Costa county boasts of having, and does have more concentrated hydro-electric energy than any place in the world, giving abundance of lowpriced fuel oil and hydro-electric power for industrial Contra Costa county can in no sense be considered "Boom" county. In both industry and agriculture it has been a steady and consistent growth of development, and today, the prosperity which the county enjoys is on a solid, substantial basis.

Contra Costa county has more concrete highways for each person than any other county in the United States, according to the last census.

The gas from Mortemoth crystals not only protects your fur-niture for a long time, but contact with it kills all moths their eggs and their dangerou larvae in furniture which is already infested.

The proper method of using Mortemoth crystals is to tie them in small sacks, and to place these sacks down in the channel of the piece, as deeply as possible, behind the cush-ions, so that, upon expansion, the gas will spread and fill the spring units in the back and in the bottom of the piece. SPECIAL MEETING

IN THE long trek across the plains, ceaseless vigilance was the price of safety. Keen-eyed scouts, familiar with the trail, protected the emigrant trains on their march westward.

This same constant vigilance is expressed in the Bank of America. Through its branches, this bank is closely woven into the business life of a hundred California communities. A network of international connections links it with the world's commercial capitals. Every department of the bank is alert to protect the interests of customers - to safeguard California business progress.

At every Branch the result of this vigilance is manifest. Each customer of the Bank of America-from the Oregon line to the Mexican border-shares in its advantages. On the basis of a service that meets every modern banking requirement, your account is invited.
